Goals

- Can recognise and explain the relevance of some more advanced strategies and phrases related to job interviews.
- Can answer a wide range of typical questions posed in job interviews, using these strategies and phrases appropriately.

Job interviews are one of the more stressful experiences in life.
And imagine doing one in English!

Job interviews

When was the last time you had
a job interview?
How did you feel before it?

Preparing for a job interview

How do you usually prepare for a job interview?

Job interviews in English

Many companies hold job interviews in English.

How would you feel about having a job interview in English?

How might it be different from your native language?

Show that you are motivated

Make sure your prospective employer knows that you are motivated for the job you are going for.

I was thrilled when Jenny told me this role was open.

I'm ready to work hard to make sure I fit into the company culture.

Sell yourself

Don't boast

There is a fine line to tread between selling yourself by telling your prospective employer about your career achievements and boasting about what you have done. You should give examples of concrete achievements in previous jobs and stick only to the facts.

In my current role, I have increased sales of children's books by 10% in the last two quarters.

I manage a team of three people which has really helped me to improve my communication skills.

Give relevant information

Research the company before your interview so you know what they are looking for and what is important to them. There is no point in only telling them about your sales figures when the job you are going for is about media relations.

I have worked on publicising new products for that market before and I know that they achieved higher than expected sales figures.

Don't use big, empty words

Showing your proficiency in English is all very well, but by using empty phrases such as my communicative skills are excellent, you are not telling the prospective employer anything about yourself.

As we said before, use concrete examples.

My communicative skills were really put to the test when I worked for two months in our Dubai office and I was able to meet so many different people from all over the world in such a short time.

Provide references

Before your interview you should check that your previous employer is happy to provide a reference. If you haven't had a job before, a professor at university can also provide a reference.

My current employer will gladly provide a reference.

A job interview

There are certain things you should do before attending a job interview. As well as finding referees and researching the company, you should also make sure that you have read the job description carefully. That way, you can tailor your answers to match what the employer is looking for. You should also have an idea about what kind of projects the company currently has on the go, as well as any that are in the pipeline if you can find out.

A job interview

You should also tell the interviewer how the job fits into your career path. This shows that you are interested in your own career and that you have considered applying for the job carefully. An employee with clear career goals is an asset for the company. Tied in to this, you should also ask about training opportunities and prospects for promotion. Show that you want to develop within the company.

A job interview

Read through the dialogue with your classmates.

Why are you the ideal candidate for this position?

Having read the job description, I know I have the skills and experience to fulfil your expectations.

Can you give me an example of when you had excellent team work skills?

I work in a team of four people at the moment and we often collaborate on projects. Most recently, I was able to take the lead on one of our projects which...

A job interview

Discuss what you think of the interviewee's answers to the questions on the previous page. Could you improve them in any way?

Brainstorm

Brainstorm more questions which often come up in job interviews.
Don't think about salary questions yet.

[illegible]

Tricky questions

Discuss how you would answer these tricky interview questions with your teacher or classmates.

What is your greatest weakness in a professional environment?

Why are you leaving your current job?

Where do you see yourself in five years' time?

A job advert

On the next page, you are going to role play an interview for the job advertised below.

Marketing Manager Wanted

Duties:

- Developing the company's marketing strategy
- Budgeting for marketing campaigns
- Coordinating marketing campaigns with the sales team

About you:

- 5 years of experience in a similar role
- Team player
- Excellent communication skills
- Creative outlook

Role play

Now role play an interview with your teacher or one of your classmates. Make sure to give feedback on how they did afterwards.

Why are you leaving your last job?

Teacher or student A: You are the interviewer

I feel that I have reached the maximum potential...

Teacher or Student B: you are the interviewee

Get ready to listen

The next few pages will focus on your listening comprehension.

Vocabulary

Listen to your teacher talking about salary. Do you know what these words mean?

remuneration

salary
supplements

perks

on a fee basis

Salary expectations

How comfortable are you talking about salary expectations?
Where can you find out about how much money you should earn in a position?

Role play

Think of three questions you could ask related to salary, either as an employer or an interviewee.
Then role play the questions with your teacher.

What are your salary expectations for the role?

Teacher or Student A: You are the interviewer

I know this is an entry level position but...

Teacher or student B: You are the interviewee

Advice for job interviews

What is the best piece of advice you could give anyone going for a job interview?

Reflect on this lesson

Take a moment to review any new vocabulary, phrases, language structures or grammar points you have come across for the first time in this lesson.

Review them with your teacher one more time to make sure you don't forget!

p. 22

Finally there is the important question of remuneration. You need to tell your prospective employer about your salary expectations, as well as any supplements or perks you would expect to get for the job. You might also be happy to work on a fee basis to give yourself more freedom. Talking about salary shows that you know your worth for the company.
